MESSAGE FROM MR LAWLOR

On Thursday we held our first of three Enrichment Days planned for this year. This represents a very welcome return to our usual approach to whole-school enrichment, providing students with a host of opportunities to engage with and explore topics and themes, including creativity, languages and careers. We also welcomed pupils from eight primary schools as part of our outreach work with the community. The primary pupils enjoyed a day of science, conducting experiments and enjoying working in the labs.

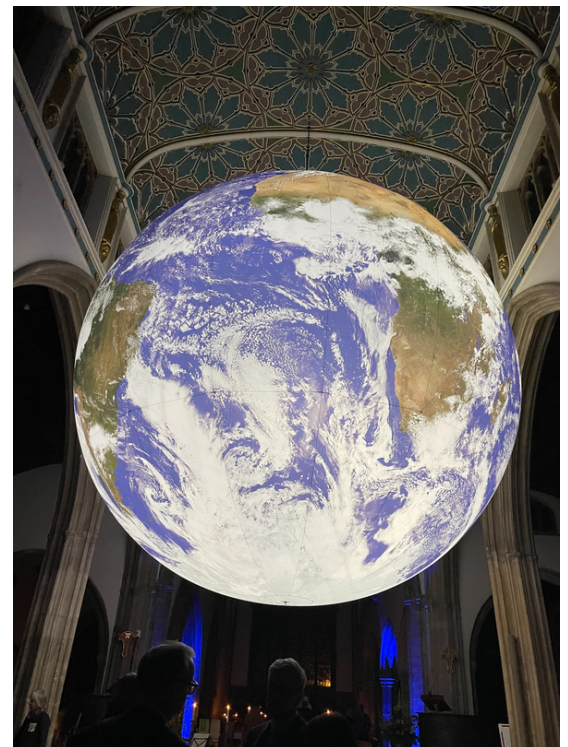

As we have noted during recent events with parents of students in Years 8, 10, 12, 7 and 11 we view education in its broadest terms, capitalising on opportunities in and beyond the classroom. In that spirit, I represented our school on Tuesday evening at the opening of Luke Jerram's Gaia Art Installation at Chelmsford Cathedral. It is a fascinating, beautiful and thought-provoking piece.

We were treated to wonderful musical performances and compelling remarks by the Dean of Chelmsford, Nicholas Henshall. The Vice-Chancellor of Anglia Ruskin University, Roderick Watkins, also spoke to note the beginning of the Chelmsford Science Festival, which started this week. I note the relevant links below for you to explore these opportunities.

A big thank you to our wonderful PA colleagues and Mrs Patel, who have arranged the disco tonight for Years 7 and 8 students.
